

Why do we need a social media like platform to help the scientific community in Tunisia

Scientific research in Tunisia is still underdeveloped, not because of the quality of the researchers and the quality of their work but mainly because of the high dependence on foreign entities (institutes, initiatives, projects...), which keep the Tunisian research community separate and disoriented.

What we need now more than most is a local platform where researchers can share their work, ask questions, create events, give feedback, and collaborate in order to create unity and push the scientific progress forward.
